

Join our third Group Relations Conference ONLINE: Complexity, role and connection - transforming our leadership

31 Aug - 4 Sept 2021

Are you prepared for what your post-pandemic leadership role requires?

In five days of full immersion, you will:

- Learn to lead when boundaries and roles are shifting unpredictably;
- Study the 'invisible' dynamics affecting organisations;
- Explore the power of working with the 'elephant in the room';
- Experience the interplay between anxiety, change, resistance and performance;
- Discover the complexity of fully taking up your own authority.
- All of this and more - if you dare to learn from your experience...

A Group Relations Conference is a real-life learning laboratory. We create and participate in a temporary organisation. This allows us to study the dynamics of leadership, uncertainty, role and transformation as these play out, amongst ourselves, in the here-and-now.

Early Bird offer ends 31 May 2021

This conference is a joint project by The Institute for Leadership and Transformation (TILT) and the Tavistock Institute of Human Relations

What others say:

"I became aware of so many obviously ineffective patterns in my style of leadership and consulting."

"This was a tremendously valuable experience. I don't think you can fully appreciate the magnitude of what has been done here."

"This was one of the most profound experiences of my life. You created a space where I could face my own shadow."

"I find that I come away from these experiences challenged, deeply reflective and in some ways fundamentally challenged. I also learn to see systems, people and interactions very differently i.e. I find myself seeing patterns in ways I never could before."
